Krogen 55' Expedition gets two big sisters

GREGG GANDY

Kadey-Krogen's Dave Glasco, naval architect, left, and Tom Button, partner, discuss plans for a new yacht with clients in the Stuart headquarters.

Kadey-Krogen Yachts has debuted its expanded Expedition series, two new models that are big sisters to the Krogen 55' Expedition, continuing the company's tradition of building fuel-efficient, comfortable, spacious yachts.

Both models are available in two-, three- or four-cabin versions with two or three heads.

Today's generation of Kadey-Krogen trawler yachts results from a 38-year heritage of innovation and nearly 600 yachts built.

Founded by Art Kadey and Jim Krogen, Kadey-Krogen Yachts currently builds vessels from 39- to 70-feet.

The company is led by all former Kadey-Krogen boat owners and is headquartered in Stuart, with additional sales offices in Annapolis, Maryland, and Seattle, Washington.
